

CONTENTS

Preface ix

Acknowledgments xi

PART ONE: SEXUALITY AND ITS DISCONTENTS

Chapter 1: Introductory: the subject of sex

Sexuality as a 'special case' 3

Sexuality as history and politics 5

Sexuality and the politics of choice 11

Chapter 2: The 'sexual revolution' revisited

The current crisis 15

The myth of 'permissiveness' 17

The commercialisation and commodification of sex 21

Shifts in sexual relations 25

The regulation of sexuality 28

Social antagonisms and political movements 31

Chapter 3: The new moralism

The new moralism and the New Right 33

Sex as fear and loathing: the example of AIDS 44

Strategies 53

PART TWO: THE SEXUAL TRADITION

Chapter 4: 'Nature had nothing to do with it': the role of sexology

Science of desire or technology of control? 61

Pioneers 64

The social relations of sexology 73

The biological imperative 79

The limits of sexology 91

Chapter 5: 'A never-ceasing duel'? 'Sex' in relation to 'society'

'Sex' versus 'society' 96

The cultural matrix 99

The selfish gene 108

The web of sexuality 120

PART THREE: THE CHALLENGE OF THE UNCONSCIOUS*Chapter 6: Sexuality and the unconscious

Why psychoanalysis? 127

The nature of sexuality 133

Oedipus and sexual identity 138

Homosexuality and perversity 149

Chapter 7: Dangerous desires

Civilisation and repression 157

The uneasy marriage of Marx and Freud 160

Politics and desire 170

The meanings of desire 177

PART FOUR: THE BOUNDARIES OF SEXUALITYChapter 8: 'Movements of affirmation': identity politics

Identity and community 185

The idea of a 'sexual minority' 195

The challenge of lesbianism 201

Making relationships 209

Chapter 9: The meaning of diversity

Erotic diversity 211

'Public sex' and the right to privacy 219

Intergenerational sex and consent 223

Pornography and power 231

The sexual fringe and sexual choice 236

Refusing to refuse the body 241

Chapter 10: Conclusion: beyond the boundaries of sexuality

246

Notes 261Index 317